and the Development Coordination Office (DCO) work to ensure that the UN's development activities in a given country are well-coordinated and aligned with the country's own development priorities and the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) of the UN. This helps to ensure that the resources and efforts of the UN and its partners are used effectively and efficiently to achieve sustainable development outcomes.

The United Nations in Colombia is supporting the government's Total Peace policy. The UN Country Team (UNCT) is composed of 27 agencies, funds and programmes, with mandates covering peace support, sustainable development, humanitarian response, gender, protection of children, and human rights, among other critical issues. Sustaining peace remains one of the three priorities of UN Sustainable Development Cooperation Framework, which guides the UNCT's joint action. Close to one third of the UNCT's portfolio has been traditionally dedicated to sustaining peace.
